Scope and Content

The Cincinnati Insurance Board records cover the period 1861 to 1992 and includes constitutions, minutes, correspondence, membership information, legal records, bulletins, newspaper clippings and scrapbooks from the Board. The collection also contains information about the Board's anniversary celebrations, sports outings, and classes and seminars. During World War II, the Cincinnati Insurance Board was involved with two local action plans (located in Box 20). In the 1960s and 1970s, the group participated in Fire Prevention Week and highway safety contests (see Box 20 and the scrapbooks).

The collection also contains information about other insurance groups and organizations. There are some materials from the Ohio Inspection Bureau, particularly printed works published by the Bureau or Analytic System publications used by the Bureau's inspectors (see Boxes 22-23). Many of the publications have the inspector's name written on the cover. Other organizations represented in this collection include the Cincinnati Inspection and Rating Bureau (Box 4), the Associated Companies, The Cincinnati Casualty & Surety Association, the Cincinnati Commission Association, and the Ohio Association of Insurance Agents (Box 21).

A limited number of records from Cincinnati insurance agents and customers are located in Box 21. Box 24 contains general insurance printed works from the Ohio Division of Insurance, the Cincinnati Inspection and Rating Bureau, the Kentucky Inspection Bureau and other sources.

Historical/Biographical Information

Cincinnati Insurance Board

The need for fire insurance to protect investments was slowly being recognized in the United States between the early 18th century and the early 19th century. However, the devastating fire in New York City in 1835 resulted in a major increase in the sale of fire insurance. This brought changes in the insurance business as insurance companies began to work more co-operatively to spread the risks and as new agents were appointed and trained. The formation of the "General Board of Fire Underwriters of Cincinnati" in 1838 provided a forum for cooperation among agents dealing in fire insurance and for educational opportunities.

Between 1838 and 1960, the Board had six name changes:

- 1851 - The Board of Underwriters of Cincinnati
- 1897 - The Cincinnati Underwriters Association
- 1906 - The Fire Underwriters Club of Cincinnati
- 1917 - The Cincinnati Fire Underwriters Association
- 1938 - The Cincinnati Underwriters Association
- 1960 - The Cincinnati Insurance Board (CIB)

Ephraim Robins is regarded as the association founder, although he was not the first president. That honor went to John J. Foote. In CIB's first 150 years, over 100 men served as president including many whose names are well known in Cincinnati insurance circles, including Frederick and Louis Rauh, West Shell and Eppa Rixey, III.

As reported in a CIB publication:

During all these many years, the C.I.B. has had an extremely strong community influence. . . . The C.I.B. has remarkable rapport with all the townships and cities in many ways. For example, the C.I.B. is the quiet power behind many major safety projects in the area and this includes support of both the police and fire services. The cooperative working relationship with the Ohio and Kentucky Insurance Departments and other governmental units is unparalleled by any other metropolitan association.

Ohio Inspection Bureau

This collection also contains some records from the Ohio Inspection Bureau. The Bureau was organized in Columbus, Ohio in December 1894 by J. W. Cochran. In 1902 Mr. Truitt B. Sellers became its manager. The Bureau had 157 inspectors in 1930 at the Columbus office and ten branch offices. The Bureau used the Dean Analytic System for rate calculation, which was published by the Western Actuarial Bureau in Chicago. Some of the inspectors at the Cincinnati office in the 1930s-1950s were Marion W. Lang, Franklin W. Holland, Wallace B. Allen and Joseph J. Seiwert.

The Bureau described its work in this way:

We are a voluntary, non-profit, unincorporated fire insurance rating and engineering organization, supported by the member and subscriber insurance companies who use our services. We are not financed or affiliated with the State, which does, however, extend close supervision over our rate-making activities as provided for by law.

We establish rates which determine the cost of fire insurance and also provide technical information to our member and subscriber companies. Our engineers are able to furnish fire prevention and fire protection information which may lead to better construction and improved fire protection with resulting lower fire insurance rates.

These services are furnished without charge or obligation to state and municipal officials, architects, contractors, industrial plants and any property owner."

In the 1970s, the Ohio Inspection Bureau became part of the Insurance Services Office, Inc. (ISO). The ISO was formed in 1971 through the consolidation of several rating bureaus. Then in 1972 the Western Actuarial Bureau consolidated with ISO. According to the ISO, the Western Actuarial Bureau was conducting business in Ohio at that time as the Ohio Inspection Bureau. As of 2001, the ISO continues to be a "leading source of information about property and liability risk".
